Procedure for Diploma Certificate Attestation

Be it any kind of document, the attestation involves the verification of documents at multiple levels. These include the regional attestation by notaries. When it comes to attestation or to authenticate a document, there are different types of procedures involved that focus on different segments to ease the overall legal process.

Attestation of Diploma Certificates includes a series of verification processes by multiple authorities of origin and destination countries.

Notary Attestation

During the initial level, the certificates undergo attestation by the local notaries. Notaries are authorities legally authorized to perform the authentication of documents. Being an educational document, the Diploma Certificate warrants attestation by the university issuing it.

Home Department Attestation

After the initial level of attestation, the diploma certificate undergoes the attestation by the State Home Department. The Sub-Divisional Magistrate also verifies the documents in certain cases on behalf of the State Home Department.

Ministry of External Affairs Attestation

As the Ministry of External Affairs manages all matters about the external affairs of the nation, it has a key role to play in the entire attestation process. To get global recognition, the diploma certificate has to undergo attestation by the Ministry of External Affairs after the attestation by the HRD. This is a simple process for document verification. Once the MEA has verified the authenticity of the document and is satisfied with it, the ministry pastes a stamp on the document. MEA attestation is applicable to signatories of the Hague Convention Treaty.

Embassy Attestation

After MEA attestation the attestation is done by the Embassy of the target country. In most countries, the process of attestation ends with the Embassy attestation.

MOFA Attestation

The final stage of the attestation procedure is the Ministry of Foreign Affairs attestation, commonly referred to as MOFA attestation. This particular procedure is necessary for educational certificates when processing work visas, transferring sponsorships, acquiring work permits, and other related matters. Individuals intending to reside and work in Qatar must undergo the mandatory legal process of Qatar MOFA certificate attestation.
